

ASKENDREYA
by Meredith Kennedy

Carried on the wind, not knowing what would be in store
Riding on the wave of all those who came before
Looking with the eyes of one who comes here wanting more Askendreya, Askendreya, you're a rose in the sun (X2)

A rose in the sun fades in time, but the fragrance remains
The scent in the rain is enough to make my heart remain
A rose in the night is something more than it seems
It holds the sweet scent of life and grandest of dreams

Askendreya, Askendreya, you're a rose in the sun

Scattered petals in the sand are all that's left of light and glory
Silent faces of the land ache to tell their ancient story
Askendreya holds our memories of what we wanted, loved and lost,
Askendreya, Askendreya, you're a rose in the sun

The enchantress of the seas, her beauty fading in the sun
Goddess of the golden sands, her power slowly comes undone
But whenever there's a rose whose fragrance blooms with sweet arrest
We will remember, we will remember what it was like to be the best Askendreya, you're a rose.