

You Can't Have it All

(David Avshalomov)

You can't have it all
You can't have it all
The world will not comply with ev'ry fantasy

You can't have it all, but still you keep on trying
Never give up until you're dead or dying
You might miss a trick
By batting an eyelash
So never admit that you're lost.

You may be standing freezing
Out in the cold
You may start feeling
Like you're getting old

Just remember one little thing:
The world is your oyster
If you can still sing

You can't have it all
But you can keep trying
As long as you feel it's worthwhile.

You want what you want
And you want it all
You have to make the world come up with ev'rything

But you're just a lonely person
Gamely striving
Constantly wond'ring if it's you who's driving

You keep losing ground
When you think you're gaining
And asking yourself why you try.

Yes it's discouraging to come up so short
To feel alone out there
Holding the fort,

Maybe you could let someone in
To help break your losing streak
With a big win

You'll still want some more
But if you get something
Then someday it may be enough.

(Can't have it all.
